To whom it may concern,
I have read over the proposed settlement in the Microsoft case and feel that the punishment is not equal to the crime. It almost appears as a slap on the wrist, gives a few new rules they have to operate by, and then allows them to continue from where they are now, minus the new rules. I feel that they should be punished and not allowed to keep the current position that they have, since they have arrived there because of illegal practices. Its like letting a thief keep what he stole if he promises to not steal anymore.
